

STATEMENT FROM ROBERT GAINES-COOPER

6 July 2011

“It remains a mystery to me why this case has come so far over so many years and ended up in The Supreme Court, when all I sought was fairness and the right to rely on published guidance from Her Majesty’s Revenue and Customs when planning my tax affairs.

I have travelled from my home in the Seychelles this week for the hearing because I believe in justice, both for myself and my family and for all UK taxpayers.

I have every confidence in my advisers and in the British legal system and so will be following proceedings over the coming days with interest as you can imagine.”

For further information on the case, please visit:

www.robertgainescooper.com